FOREWORD

The ideal of courteous behavior which was formulated in Medieval times has come down to us as one of the ageless and beautiful concepts of human endeavor. By making it a living and real part of our life today we would sustain it and hand it on as an eternal verity.

In Memoriam

JOHN G. MILBURN

Died: August 11, 1930

MR. MILBURN was a Trustee of Barnard College for twenty-four years, and for thirteen years, up to the time of his death, Chairman of the Board. One of the most distinguished lawyers in New York, greatly admired and beloved by his fellow members of the Bar, he brought to the governing board of Barnard much distinction and the respect of the community. He brought also something even more precious, for he had an extraordinary gift of creating an atmosphere of kindliness and wisdom. Under his chairmanship the deliberations of the Trustees were carried on in a spirit which gave assurance that their decisions would be liberal, humane and wise. His deep interest in Barnard, his lovable personality, which won the affection of all his associates, his wide culture, and his wise leadership, made him one of the most valued friends the College has ever known.

LUCRETIA PERRY OSBORN

(Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborn)

Died: August 26, 1930

MRS. OSBORN was a Trustee of Barnard College for thirty-seven years. Becoming a member of the Board in the early days, when the College was very small and very poor, she at once took an intense interest in its welfare and development, and for many years gave active service in raising money to keep it alive, in making personal contacts with its students and officers, in adjusting our educational relations with Columbia, and in serving on the various committees of the Board.

A woman of many intellectual interests, author of several books, in touch with vitally important work in the fields of science, archaeology and music, and with a multitude of valuable social connections, she brought to Barnard broadening and enriching relations with the outer world. For the College she had helped to develop from its infancy to maturity and strength, she felt to the end warm affection and regard. Barnard will greatly miss the stimulus and encouragement of her glowing interest and friendly aid.

Every student at Barnard College is a member of the Undergraduate Association. This self-governing body is organized under three boards: Student Council, the executive; Representative Assembly, the legislative; and Honor Board, the judiciary. Student Council has the added function of furthering co-operation between the students and both Faculty and Alumnae.

Undergraduate Awards

The Bear Pin is the official award of the Undergraduate Association of Barnard College. It is awarded each year at the discretion of the Student Council to those Undergraduates who, in its opinion, have rendered services to the Association deserving of special recognition. The measure of these services is distinguished by three classes of awards: Blue, Gold, and Bronze.

The Honor System was originally adopted by the Undergraduate Association at the suggestion of the students themselves. It has become Barnard's most important tradition and part of student government. The Honor Code states the standard of honor expected of everyone. All students are asked to sign the Code to indicate understanding of this standard. Violations of the Honor System are dealt with by the Honor Board, composed of two members from each class. The success of the Honor System depends on the loyalty of every member of the Barnard community. Discussion of the system is welcomed.

Class—1931

Mascot—Indian

Color—Red

Flower—Rose

Motto—Possumus quia posse videmur

The principal ambition of Miss Thelma Thiry-One
Was finding her a gentleman whose corpuscles would run
A flaming red, for she was sick of all Manhattan's new bloods
And living in New York she'd been brought up among the blue bloods.
She had no love for Harvard and no deep dislike for Yale
But a hunch that when the blood was blue the liver would be pale.
And lily-colored livers, as our story soon discloses,
Were anathema to one whose floral passion ran to roses.
So one spring day Miss Thelma donned—whatever women don—
And pinned a rose (of course the rose was crimson colored) on.
And started out to walk the streets—with strictly moral tread—
In search of some be-trousered soul with blood of flaming red.
On Riverside the sailors gave her scarcely subtle looks;
On Broadway all the college boys forgot their college books,
And farther East when dusky men would slacken in their paces,
Miss Thelma knew their blood was just as black as were their faces.
Her faith was slowly failing as she turned into the Bronx
And she heard the hard ha-ha of fate in all the auto honks,
But thinking of the motto that adorned the family wall,
She saw she could succeed as long as she could see at all.
And as she squared her shoulders and resumed her gallant gait,
Before her stood a figure very tall and very straight.
He never moved a muscle and his eyes looked straight ahead—
Miss Thelma knew instinctively his blood was royal red.
He stood before a dirty store along a dirty street
And yet his noble air made Thelma's heart begin to beat
As up she rushed, forgetting how unseemingly it would seem
To one who did not know that she had realized her dream.
She reached his feet, she touched his arm, she fainted where she stood—
The store was a cigar-store, and the man was made of wood.

* * *

The moral of this tale—for it is moral after all—
Comes on when Thelma tears the family motto off the wall
And promises her mother she will henceforth be demure.—
(The motto read—Possumus quia posse videmur.)

Mascot—Dragon

Colors—Buff and Blue

Flower—Chrysanthemum

Motto—Proportion

Miss Trudy Thirty-Two had always led her class at school.
She knew about the birds and bees; she knew the golden rule;
When asked her favorite song she would reply, "'The National Anthem, Mum,"
But goldenrod, the national flower, was second to chrysanthemum.
And in the line of beasts and birds (not birds and bees), the national
Regard for golden eagles made her seem a bit irrational,
When she confessed a silly secret passion for the dragon,
(That horrid horned fire-breathing beastie,—just imagine!)
And to her taste, red-white-and-blue was totally unbearable—
For she considered buff and blue the only colors wearable.—
She might have been expelled from school for such subversive preference
And yet they had to tolerate her fancies out of deference
To geometric genius which she had in such abundance
That Pythagorean problems were ridiculous redundance.
One night after a field trip when the girls had gathered flowers,
Miss Trudy lay in bed and tossed for hours upon hours
Till finally she fell asleep and soon began to dream—
Miss Trudy trod and tramped and trudged along an endless stream
Among a mass of violets and primroses and asters
The sight of which made Trudy sick and made her travel faster
Till suddenly she spied a flower beautiful and buff,
"Chrysanthemum" she cried and couldn't reach it fast enough.
And as she rose from picking it she saw another gem—
A blue and brilliant image of a dragon on a stem.
The thought of putting buff and blue together made her happy
And she didn't even jump to find the dragon rather snappy.
(The pun was unintentional—your pardon I request—
The dragon was a snap-dragon as you had doubtless guessed)
Alas—she didn't notice that the dragon was immense
While the little buff chrysanthemum was tiny (if intense).
So when she got the two of them in just juxtaposition
She had to scream, but feeble was the audible emission.
It scarcely was a sound at all, but just a quiet croak.
She frothed and fell upon the floor and never never woke.—
The doctor said that she had died of some acute contortion.
She really died because her dream was out of all proportion.

Class—1933

Mascot—Bulldog

Flower—Dogwood

Color—Green

Motto—"Never say die."

Theresa Thirty-Three was an inventive little soul
With a predilective leaning for an independent role.
She had a grim foreboding and her awful fear was that
If she had no vital project she'd become a copy-cat.
So she took her little bulldog and she put him on a chain
And went seeking mental pabulum to exercise her brain.
But no sooner had she started when she met her first frustration
'Cause the bulldog far from docile, had his own determination
And he didn't seem attracted to the straight and narrow road;
He also felt original, and this insistence told
For he led her in a manner that no acquiescent dog should
To a flowering, arboreal, and verdant blooming dogwood.
Now Tess was used to taking him the path that she preferred
And was not just the sort of girl who cared to be deterred.
She'd always had a one-track mind, and now was adamant,
She arrogantly tossed her head and shouted "Pup, you shan't!"
But the bulldog wouldn't listen or else did not care for hearing;
Or hearing, just would not comply but started mutineering.
He braced his legs, he gave a growl, he pulled her to the ground
And dragged her, for she'd not let go, (that aggravating hound)
With perilous increasing speed to his own promised land
While Tessy bumped along behind not just as she had planned:
And all the greenish colour of the early dew-soaked lawn
Came off on Tessy's brand new dress which now was sadly torn.
It looked as if the end had come upon her pertinacity,
Had not success then dulled the silly bulldog's perspicacity,
For they suddenly collided with a rock where Tess took anchor
And the bulldog couldn't budge Theresa no matter how he'd yank her.
The victory was Tessy's and she struggled to compose
Her rumpled-up exterior as from the ground she rose
Though very bruised and very green (not mentally, of course)
She squared triumphant shoulders, no longer at a loss,
And spoke with measured dignity, befitting of her station
(Especially to a stupid pup who'd had no education).
Before she spoke, however, she looked him in the eye
And in three words let fall this pearl, "Never say die."

Class—1934

Mascot—Lion

Colors—Gold and Brown

Flower—Yellow Tea Rose

Motto—Loyalty

A tousle-headed tot was Theodora Thirty-Four
Her friends all called her Teddy and it made her awful sore
Because (although without a hat and with her little heady bare
She granted, Theodora did, she looked just like a teddy-bear)
She'd always sort of wanted and she still was always tryin'
To look just like a royal—not a social—kind of lion.
She knew her hair was golden and she knew her eyes were brown,
And she knew she looked ferocious when she made an awful frown.
And she couldn't see just why with brownish eyes and golden hair
And a ferocious-looking frown, she kept on looking like a bear.
She hated being "Teddy," but she wanted to be loyal
To her friends, and though the nick-name made her blood begin to boil,
She would never say a word, although they called her "Teddy" three or nine
Times in a day:—she only kept on trying to look leonine.
Her very dearest boy-friend, who had been one of her heroes,
Since once when she was sick and he had brought a yellow tea-rose
Just because he had remembered that a tea-rose colored yellow
Was his Teddy's favorite flower—such a thoughtful sort of fellow—
This boy friend one time came with a paternalistic air
And sat himself upon the arm of Theodora's chair,
And said if she should ever realise what being gauche is
She would cease at once her efforts to appear to look ferocious.
And then he said he loved her, after which, and at the end,
He begged her to look sweet, and he advised it as a friend.—

* * *

Now they're married to each other and Miss Teddy never tries
To look the least bit lion-like, or squint her brownish eyes.
But if you ask her why she gave up playing beastly-royalty
She'll say she did it not for love, but just from sense of loyalty.

The Ballad of Thirty-Two

Fayre showne the sun in Barnard's Halls,
The winter had not come,
When entered in those erraunt Knyghts,
With sound of fyfe and drumme.

Well were they shriven and confessed;
Wi' feet so cauld and bare,
And robes of sackcloth they paced
Nigh to Friar Alsop's chair.

To numbers straunge they gave their faith
And swore great service true—
And hight they ever after then
The Knyghts of Thirty Two.

The elder Knyghts of Thirty One
Shook gray and hoarye heads.
"Not long these maiden Knyghts," quoth they,
"Have left their trundle beds."

"We needs must try their courage, now,
If it be keen and bryght.
All on the morrow dark o' moon
We'll give them mickle fryght."

But to the Glaume of Mysterie
No valiant Knyghthoode yields:
That eve they won their shining spurs
And blazonings on their shields.

"Come up, come up, my bonnie men,"
Then cried the Thirty One,
"We'll throw the gauge in open fray
And see the tourney won."

Brave Hargrove led our Knyghts amain,
A doughty lord, I wist,
And two fayre ladies knowne of old
Were patrons of the list.

The elder Knyghts they took the prize—
Alack, the grievous year
When fayre young Knyghts go vanquished home
And drop a briny tear!

The moon it waxed and waned again,
And soon the Spring was gone.
The gentle Knyghts went home from toyle,
Right gladly eche one.

"Come back, come back, you bonny wights
And busk you for the battle.
You're older now; new maiden Knyghts
Can hear your deyvil's rattle."

So sang the bells at automntide,
Through hall and copse and shaw.
And Thirty Two came back again
Their bugles for to blaw.

To trye those tender Knyghts so new
They cast their challenge free.
And with their Chieftain, dauntless Furse,
They smote them in the e'e.

That year they gave a festive ball
On the auncient battle field,—
Now they were maiden Knyghts for fayre
As merrily they wheeled.

High sat a puissaunt, honoured Knyght,
And ladies of renown,
To see the gay and fayre and brave
And hear sweet musick sound.

Then when the trees gan forth again
To put their green robes on,
Our gentle Knyghts they held a feast
At Castle Barbizon.

So ended then the second yeare;
And now stern elders they,
Who came eftsoon with spotless lance
All on that automn day.

Yet not so stern,—they still can trippe
A sprightlye promenade
In Sherry's Halls, bryght banner-draped,
In ev'ry hew arrayed.

They still can act right cheerilye
The gayest piece e'er given:
And with the fayre Hortense as guide
Can sing like Saynctes in Heaven.

Now do they hold the strong redoubt
Whereon they labored sore,
And plant their azure standard there,—
The guerdon of Gilmore.

To numbers straunge they've kept their faith,
And rendered service true.
There ne'er were lords so dauntless yet
As the Knyghts of Thirty Two.

Junior Prom

Junior Prom—the outstanding social event in the college calendar far surpassed the expectations of all those who attended it. Over one hundred and twenty-five Juniors, Seniors and guests of honor came for an evening of dancing and dining at Sherry's ballroom, the scene of the gala affair.

The preliminaries for Junior Prom are a vital part of the event, since blue leather programs must be filled out appropriately long before the important night; evening gowns must be chosen with utmost care; and above all, the escort must be the epitome of perfection. Judging by the aggregation of couples attending Prom, all these details had been exceedingly adroitly handled. In the concensus of opinion, the dance was a momentous success. When the dancers flocked to the tables for the midnight supper, served between the seventh and eighth dances, they found attractive favors awaiting them. Those for the girls were neat black and silver compacts with the class initials on the cover, while the men received black leather wallets embossed with the college seal. Phil Romano's Orchestra completed the general scheme of perfection.

The Prom Committee included Misses Madeleine Gilmore, ex officio, Lucienne Cougnenc, Mathilde Rodger, Alice Fisher, Grace Joline, Olga Maurer, and Beatrice Serge. Miss Sally Vredenburgh, President of the Undergraduate Body was student guest of honor. The list of the Faculty invited included Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, who was unfortunately unable to attend, Acting Dean and Mrs. George Walker Mullins, Miss Barbara Kruger, and Dr. G. Marshall Kay. The Faculty, Miss Christianna Furse, Prom Chairman, Miss Madeleine Gilmore, President of the Class, and Miss Vredenburgh formed the receiving line.

SUNSET

Weep for the sun that is sunken in the sea;
Weep for the magic in the broken bell—
For the trembling dawn that was and will not be—
Hear them, hear them weeping there in hell.
This day that came like some beloved woman,
Love on her mouth and honey on her breast;
Weep for her for she was born half human,
And pale with more than sleep, she must depart.
Weep for the sun that is sunken in the sea;
The fire on the breast of noon is rust;
Weep for the sun that is sunken in the sea;
And leaves us to our melancholy dusk.
Weep for all once red as flesh is red;
Weep for all the beautiful and dead.

Contest in Dance

FRESHMAN YEAR

Famine threatens Eleusis. A procession of the populace approaches the steps of the great temple to Demeter, the harvest goddess, to pray for the end of the famine. They stop before the temple steps and dance a prayer ritual to Demeter, enacting the drama of the harvest, the sowing, the reaping, and the gathering of the grain.

The goddess answers their prayers. The priestesses emerge from the temple and join the people in their dance of Thanksgiving.

CLASS OF 1932

On the annual procession to Eleusis, the sacred city of Demeter, the Athenians, men, women, and children, pay homage at a wayside shrine to Bacchus, symbol of life. They have laid their offerings before the altar and are bowed in worship, when there appears a dusty band of pilgrims, driven from Eleusis by famine. They appeal to the Athenians for food; some throw themselves hysterically upon the offerings at the altar. Enraged at this sacrilege, the Athenians drive off the desecrators with shouts and blows. Suddenly, in the midst of the tumult, a crash is heard. The statue of Bacchus has fallen from its pedestal and lies shattered upon the steps. Stricken with horror, the mob creeps back to the shrine and listens in silence. The portent is a manifestation of Demeter's displeasure at their greed and selfishness. To regain the favor of the goddess, they must take up their sacrifices and offer them instead to their suffering fellowmen. Humbled, the people of Athens gather up the fruits and grains and set out to overtake the Eleusians.

ENTRANCE

This is a procession of the hours of the day, from the rising to the setting of Helios, the Sun.

Dawn begins.
Morning breaks. The Sun rises triumphant.
The hours of labor follows the rising of the Sun.
The Sun is at the zenith.
The noon of the Sun is celebrated with invocation.
The worshippers chant the hymn of the Sun.
Sunset—the procession of the Sun to the East.
Dusk and night descend.

Contest in Dance

According to the custom, the young men of Athens go beyond the city walls to join in games. On their arrival at an open space, the group begins its sport which becomes enlivened by rivalries. One young Athenian challenges his fellows to a contest in leaping.

As the victor of the contest is acclaimed, Phaeton, elated at the discovery that his father is the sun god, rushes into their midst. Convinced of his superiority, he offers to compete with the winner, and easily surpasses him. Very haughtily, he accepts the congratulations of his friends and proudly turns to salute the sun, whom he addresses as father. The young men laugh at him. Stung by their skepticism, he boasts he will prove his immortal descent. With jests and jeers the young men turn again to their play, while Phaeton angrily leaves to fulfil his promise.

The rash youth obtains permission from the unwilling Helios to drive the chariot of the sun. The fiery horses break from his control, and in vain Helios tries to guide his steeds. To prevent the destruction of the earth, Zeus hurls a thunderbolt at the unfortunate youth who falls earthward. The Athenian youths, already frightened by the unusual commotion in the sky, flee in terror as Phaeton drops near the scene of their play. The flames of the thunderbolt creep upon his prostrate body, becoming more and more furious until, their work accomplished, they swirl off in triumph, leaving the ashes of their victim on the field of his former victory.

Phaeton, boasting to his playmates that his father is Helios, God of the Sun, is taunted by them. Resolving to prove it he begs Helios to allow him to drive the chariot of the Sun. Helios having given his reluctant promise, cannot withdraw it. So Phaeton is charioteer for one day. The fiery horses of the Sun dash out, and held in check, paw the ground. Phaeton calls to them and they leap forward. Then begins the long steep climb to Noonday. Reaching the peak, they pause to rest. Phaeton calls to them and urges them on with his whip. Hearing the unfamiliar voice, they begin to rear and shy. The chariot, uncontrolled, lurches crazily. The earth and sky are alternately in danger of being set ablaze. Jupiter, to save the world, throws a thunderbolt at the rash charioteer. Phaeton falls dead to the floor of the chariot. The terrified horses plunge off, unguided.

Wigs and Cues, the dramatic organization of Barnard College, has for its aim and purpose, the promotion of a high standard of college dramatics in choice of plays, acting, producing, and dramatic experiment; it desires to give those interested in the drama an opportunity of gaining knowledge and experience in the dramatic arts, and to recognize and encourage student composition of plays.

After a one-year trial of the system of open membership, Wigs and Cues has returned to its original system of closed membership based on competitive Tryout plays.

This year, Wigs and Cues has adopted as its plan of production, a program of revivals of typical and outstanding examples of English drama, augmented by worthwhile plays of student composition. This project was inaugurated in the Fall Production of "Beaux' Stratagem" of Farquhar, adapted and directed by Miss Agnes Morgan in the eighteenth century manner; and will be completed in the Spring Term by one one-act revival from early English drama, one modern and one original one-act play.

N. S. F. A.

The National Students' Federation of America held its annual congress at Atlanta, Georgia, during Christmas vacation. The purpose of the organization is to "develop an intelligent student opinion on questions of national and international importance." Since approximately three hundred colleges were represented, smaller groups were formed in order that real progress in student problems might be made among homogeneous colleges.

It was at the women's college discussion group that the Barnard delegate found problems similar to those at Barnard and new ideas for the solution of these problems. At the general meetings of the Congress, student opinion was sounded on 100 questions such as commercialism in athletics, the effectiveness of Prohibition in American colleges and the present-day stand on tariff.

The contact with the delegates from other sections of the country was invaluable, for it made clear the provincialism that American students must overcome in order to take their stand as a unit. If it were for nothing other than this, the N. S. F.A. would justify its existence. Continued membership in this organization seems almost imperative, for N. S. F. A. has more to offer and Barnard has more to give.

The Barnard delegate was Frances Smith, '32.

STUDENT FELLOWSHIP

A Student Fellowship drive is held annually to maintain two international fellowships of a thousand dollars each. This fund is raised by the students through voluntary contribution.

A committee, consisting of the members of the faculty and the president of the undergraduate association, selects a group of candidates. From this group the college at large elects a member of the graduating class on whom to confer the fellowship. The scholarship is to be used for graduate study at any foreign university which the student desires to attend. The other scholarship is awarded to a foreign student for a year's study at Barnard. Mary Goggin, '30, is the Barnard fellow this year, and is studying at the American University of Classical Studies at Athens. The foreign student is Mary McKenzie of Wales.

Junior Month

Every year under the direction of Miss Clare M. Tousley, representatives of the Junior Classes of Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Wells, Goucher, Connecticut, Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore, Elmira, and Barnard, are given the unusual opportunity of surveying social conditions in New York. For the first two weeks these twelve girls are given instruction by leading workers in the social field, and conducted on tours of inspection. During the last two weeks, they try out through actual experience what they have learned in theory. Each girl takes up the phase of sociology in which she is most interested. There are several fields from which she may choose, such as Housing, Child Placing, Social Work in Industry, Medical Social Service, and Work with Mental Defectives and Juvenile Delinquents. The girls who attend Junior Month are not necessarily sociology majors. They are girls representative of their colleges who will be able to take back and use to advantage the experience they have gathered.

Miss Tousley is an inspiring and experienced leader. In her position as Assistant Director of the Charity Organization Society of New York City she is able to give the girls a full view of the entire social field. The expenses of Junior Month are paid by the Charity Organization Society, and it is under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society that the undertaking has been carried through.

Miss Helen Foote was Barnard's representative for the Junior Month of 1930.

W. I. N. A.

Various aspects of college journalism were the subjects of discussions at the annual convention of the Women's Intercollegiate News Association held at Goucher on December 5th and 6th, 1930.

Representatives of the major eastern women's colleges gathered at round table meetings to exchange ideas of prevalent newspaper management and potential plans for the betterment of their respective publications.

The editorial group, led by Mr. John T. Flynn, journalist and editor, discussed the best policies to be pursued as to content and make-up of college publications. One of the topics under consideration was that of faculty supervision and censorship, neither of which are experienced at Barnard. Another editorial problem was that of the introduction of outside news into college newspapers, a practice which was disapproved of if used too often.

The group discussions of the business managers were led by Mr. George Bertsch of the Baltimore Sun. At these meetings, quality as well as quantity of advertising was stressed as was the point that college publications are good media for prestige appeal.

Delegates from the Barnard Bulletin were Ruth Jacobus, editor, Dorothy Rasch, business manager, Beatrice Saqui, managing editor, and Juliet Blume, advertising manager.

Clubs

Classical Club

Catherine Campbell, '31	President
Elsa Zorn, '31	Secretary
Helen Appell, '32	Treasurer

The Classical Club this year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding by Miss Elizabeth Toms in honor of the late Mortimer Tamson Earle. The organization holds the distinction of being the oldest club at Barnard College. The membership of the club includes many alumnae and representatives of the faculty, as well as undergraduates interested in ancient culture. Its purpose is to give its members a more extensive knowledge of the civilizations of Greece and Rome with their attendant influence on modern life. The meetings are held informally, often taking the form of teas at which distinguished speakers address the members on subjects relating to the countries of antiquity. The literature, art, and social conditions of classical periods are discussed.

Deutscher Kreis

Gerda Halgreen Carroll	President
Erika Horwitz	Vice-President
Marion Dreyfus	Secretary
Marjorie Mueller	Treasurer
Irmgard Aue	Publicity Chairman

The activities of Barnard students interested in the German language, literature and customs have found expression in the program of the Deutscher Kreis. The Kreis was formally instituted in 1924. Since its organization it has been benefited by a fund given by Mr. Edward D. Adams to the German Department, providing for the Adam's prize and "such extra-curricular activities as will tend to bring German life and civilization closer to the appreciation of American students and the further mutual understanding and good will between the youth of both countries."

Assisted and supported by the German Department the programs of the Kreis have been planned to bring students into contact with the artistic, musical, and everyday Germany. Among the guest artists have been Madame Clara Clemens Gabrilowitsch who presented a program of German music; Dr. Nikolussi who has been active in an attempt to liberate the people of the Tyrol from Italian rule; Fraulein Margarethe Wallman, one of Germany's foremost dance artists.

The Christmas Party given by the Deutscher Kreis is a tradition which has delighted the undergraduates at Barnard for many Yuletide seasons. The characteristic features are a lighted Christmas tree, German Christmas refreshments and confections, including Marzipan, and the singing of carols. The new feature this year was the presentation of a Nativity Play, interpreted in simple Medieval style.

La Societe Francaise

Lucienne Cougnenc	President
Lucretia Moeller	Vice-Pres. and Social Chairman
Esther Grabelsky	Secretary
Alice Fisher	Treasurer
Ellen Forsyth	Publicity Chairman

La Société Française is an organization for the furthering of interest in French literature, art, music, politics and all other subjects relating to France. Bi-weekly luncheons are held to give students practice in general French conversation. Of the eight teas given throughout the year, two are devoted to French plays and one to the presentation of popular songs from the twelfth century up to the present time. The remainder of the teas are held in honor of eminent visitors who bring the club members in closer contact with current French affairs. The outstanding event of the year is a soiree at which a modern French play is interpreted; dancing follows the presentation, which is attended by the college at large.

Glee Club

Else Zorn	President
Martha Maack	Secretary
Evelyn Anderson	Business Manager
Louise Conklin	Librarian

The Glee Club was Barnard's first musical organization. With the creation of a Department of Music in 1929, interest in the musical activities of Barnard increased. This interest also manifested itself in an enlarged and active Glee Club. This year it comprises fifty enthusiastic members working under the professional leadership of Mr. Lowell P. Beveridge, Director of Choral and Church Music at Barnard and Columbia.

The Glee Club, which has presented several successful formal concerts in the past two years and also informal programs on the campus, is extending its activities outside the college walls, and in the coming season will undertake several off-campus concerts.

In the Fall of 1930, the Club presented a Tea Concert in the College Parlor, its annual Concert in Casa Italianna, and an assembly program. The program for the spring term includes a concert at the Alumnae Luncheon in the Hotel Pennsylvania, concerts in New York City, Brooklyn and Suffern, New York, a Lenten Song Service in Saint Paul's Chapel by the combined Barnard and Columbia Glee Clubs and the Chapel Choir, and a joint concert with Columbia in May.

El Circulo Hispano

Ethel Clinchy	President
Margaret Wadds	Vice-President
Elizabeth Despard	Secretary
Janet McPherson	Publicity Manager

The aim of the Spanish Club of Barnard College is to bring together those interested in Spanish life and culture. At a series of teas held by the club, prominent speakers from Spain and Latin America address the Circulo. The opening tea of the year was given in honor of the visiting porfessor of Spanish, Senorita Gabriela Mistral, who is deeply interested in the promotion of a fuller understanding between the United States and Spanish-speaking countries.

One of the chief activities of the Circulo Hispano is the maintenance of the recently inaugurated scholarship which enables a Barnard girl to enjoy the privilege of a year of study in Spain and brings the club into closer contact with Spanish Civilization.

International Club

Nina Marean, '31	Social Chairman
Martha Scacciaferro, '31	Publicity Chairman

International Club is one of the youngest of all of Barnard's organizations. It was founded in the Spring of 1928 by a group of foreign students, headed by Irene Huber, an exchange student from Switzerland. Their express purpose in forming the club was to bring into closer contact, the foreign and American students, thus bridging the gap between different races and nationalities. This aim is carried out by bringing to the College representative speakers of other lands, and also by giving informal teas in which the members acquaint themselves with various countries. The college has responded with enthusiasm to all that the club has accomplished, and is doing much to encourage every aspect of the idea of internationalism.

Italian Club

Anna Taranto	President
Alida Fortier	Vice-President
Alice Haines	Secretary
Eleanor Crapullo	Treasurer
Marie d'Antona	Social Chairman

The Italian Club has set forth as its purpose the desire to interest students in the literature and culture of the Italian people. It was with this purpose in mind that the Club arranged a series of four lectures on the subject of Italian Renaissance painting. Two of these lectures were given by Professor Haring, and the remaining two by Dr. Mario Soldati. Teas were given in connection with the lectures, and at Christmas, the Club entertained with a Miracle Play and a tea. The Casa Italiana, recently dedicated, is the center of Italian activities at the University. It is hoped by the Club that the Casa Italiana will be a means to arousing interest in Italian culture.

Menorah

Edith Gutman	President
Jean Waterman	Vice-President
Beatrice Serge	Secretary
Mildred Pearson	Treasurer
Meta Glasser	Publicity Manager

The purpose of the Barnard Menorah is to study Jewish life and thought with especial emphasis on problems pertaining to contemporary Jewish culture throughout the world. Monthly teas are held at which men prominent in their fields have spoken on Zionism, Hebrew poetry, both liturgical and modern, and various other phases of the modern Hebrew Renaissance. In the past year, a series of lectures tracing the development of modern political Zionism was given by Mr. Jacob de Haas and Mr. Simon Halkin. Although dealing with subjects relating to current Jewish problems, Menorah attempts to treat of the field in its correlation with general culture. It is a non-sectarian organization, and as such, invites membership from the college at large.

The Newman Club is a Catholic organization whose primary purpose is to unite its members both socially and religiously. The Barnard Newman Club is a member of the New York Province of the International Federation of Catholic Clubs and is especially fortunate in having at its disposal Newman Hall, a center for Catholic students, located conveniently in 115th Street. The building is beautifully and completely equipped with a library, reception and lounging room, and chapel. A series of talks is given by Chaplain Ford on subjects of current and religious interest and prominent speakers address the group at teas given by the club during the year. Besides the cultural program, there is a social program which includes tea dances, bridges and a formal dance.

Barnard Alumnae Representatives on the College Women's Auxiliary of the Art Workshop

The Alumnae in Action

Graduation is not the end! In fact, when we consider the activities of the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College we are inclined to think it is the real beginning of a great many collegiate services. Too often students feel that the main interest of our graduates centers in attending reunions and reading the Alumnae Bulletin, but MORTARBOARD wishes to point out and acknowledge the unselfish efforts of the Association to make undergraduate life more interesting and profitable.

Barnard Camp, the scene of so many care-free week-ends for weary students is sponsored by the Alumnae Association. Since the camp is open primarily to undergraduates, its supporters are acting from purely disinterested motives.

A universal campus question is, "What do we do after our four years of preparation?" Wordly-wise and successful possessors of the Barnard degree plan vocational teas and suppers at which they relate their experiences in business and professional fields. We learn about feminine careers from these women who have already molded theirs.

The Students' Loan Committee is an ever-present source of financial aid for girls who would otherwise find it difficult or impossible to continue their studies. Did you know this committee, too, is an alumnae organization?

Financial and other problems are frequently most satisfactorily met by giving the college desirable publicity. The Alumnae Council does much to further this—Barnard correspondence cards and the book of Greek Games Lyrics are products of its work. Our Association is also represented on the Alumnae Committee for Seven Colleges, a group which directs the general publicity for women's colleges. The public simply cannot help becoming Barnard-conscious.

MORTARBOARD proposes a toast to the Barnard Alumnae!

Stand, O Teacup

Teacup, set on naught eternal,
Hot and burning through my knee,
Soon thy warmth will be internal
If thou rest here steadily.
How I stood in line to get thee,
Was thine all-protecting guide!

(CHORUS)

Stand, O Teacup! Pretty Teacup—
On my trembling knee abide.

(Repeat)

Hunger, thirst and curiosity
Led me to thy circled brow,
Born of some club's generosity—
I forget the name just now.
If thou'rt good, I shall remember
Ere some faux pas does betide!

(CHORUS)

Stand, O Teacup! Pretty Teacup—
On my trembling knee abide.

(Repeat)

Prof. Joshua James June Speaks at College on Tuesday Last

SUBJECT INTERESTING

Address Well Received by Interested Audience on Libido

The girls of Barnard College were greatly honored to receive Prof. Joshua James June, on their platform Tuesday last, at one ten in the gymnasium of Barnard Hall, February 10, 1931.

Prof. J. J. J. was well received by the Barnard students who were interested to hear his enlightening address that he gave. The lecture was a discourse on how to successfully aeuffgg the libido. It was especially interesteding to those interested in the libido.

Now the libido is

MRS. THOMSON CHECKS OUT

If it hadn't been for Harkness it all wouldn't have happened. Every Wednesday night, Father threw his shoes at Mother, and what right had Harkness to order crêpes Suzette anyway? Mrs. Carson opened her morning mail, and sighed. How delightfully the sunlight played on her finger nail. She felt alive, alive.

"Tom," she called shrilly, turning a moment to feed the goldfish which were smiling up at her from their cool home on the library table.

"If only Aunt Effie weren't coming from Cohoca County!", she mused. Aunt Effie was the children's aunt. She would bring back all the haunting memories, those moon-swept moments which she had tried in vain to forget for fifty-three years. It was all etched indelibly on her brain: the gorse blooming on the heather, the bracken singing sweetly from every tarn, and he beside her in the aftermath. For a moment she almost hated Aunt Effie.

The telephone rang with metallic insistence. Soon Aunt Effie would be there. She must get this "pas de tout" out of the way before her arrival. Already she could hear the moving of carriage wheels on the driveway. Frail and shining, Aunt Effie stood before her——

FILET OF SOUL

All white and shining was our little love
All young and small, the sand lay in your mouth.
How could I know you were a moulting dove
And that in winter moulting doves fly south?

How could I know the tulip has its day,
How could I know the wanton, smiling stream
Would one day toss its mane like withered hay
And leave me in the chalice of a dream?

Hiding behind a burning, chiselled tear,
I could not know the seagull's whispering
Nor could I hold within my vernal ear
The wild, sweet anklet bells of fallen spring.

SONNET

When I am dead, will cowbells bloom more sweet
Than now they bloom? Your bright propinquity
Will wander on through glades where never hushed
The warm sky-belted bee spins its small web
In some forgotten church I never saw;
And soft my soul will call to you and slow
Like faun calling to faun, like doe to doe.

An Average Professor's Analysis of An Average Student's Philosophy

Avoid that future phlehora.
A premature sad death, or a
    Fate far worse than any moribundity
Awaits the student cruelly
Who should use her brain unduly,
    Since the primal sin is cranial fecundity.

To a Lobster in Zoo Lab

Dear lobster, I implore you
To believe that I adore you—
    Oh, indeed, I love you most exceeding well.
You're my one and only fetish.
But I get a trifle pettish
    When you none too shyly come from out your shell.

The Curse of Health

'Oh, doctor, isn't there something the matter
With me and my health? Are you sure my anato-
My really is perfect? Are you sure that a trace'll
Not show that I'm terribly weak on my basal
Metabolism? Couldn't you, oh doctor, kindly confirm a
Statement remarking I've a slight murmur
Of the heart? Are you sure I don't seem a
Bit nervous or lacking the requisite haemo-
Globin? Oh, doctor, this really is very
Disheartening, because, I regret I'm not peri-
Patetic by nature, and my good health, alas,
Keeps me from getting an elevator pass.

Cold As Banished Soap

(A Woeful Song from the Shower)

Banished hope,
Oh vanished soap,
I woo you, and I'll do you any favor.
Just appear!
You must! Oh dear,
Where are you? I won't bar you, little laver.
I would rather
Spy your lather
Than be heir to millions. They're too
        Much for coping.
Don't be fickle!
Won't you trickle
To my ken? For I've a yen for
        One good soaping.

Frustration

I am yearning for a tryst.
I would wander where I list—
Sally forth—I know not wist—
Accustomed nooks forsake.

But Barnard has a fearful hold
On all who come within her fold.
And so, I'll meet you, as of old
At 12—on Jake!

IRVING CHIDNOFF

CHIDNOFF STUDIO

469 FIFTH AVENUE — NEW YORK CITY

THE ACHIEVEMENT OF AN IDEAL

A YEARBOOK is more than a series of printed pages bound into a cover. It is the result of hours of anxious thought and patient, persistent effort. The staff of THE MORTARBOARD have accepted a real responsibility, and under the leadership of the Editor, Miss Dorothy Kramm, they have produced a book of which they may well be proud. We feel sure that you who turn these pages and re-live the events of the year just concluded, will join us in congratulating them.

» In our humble capacity as publishers, it has been a privilege to be associated with the production of this book. Perhaps we have in a small way caught some of the enthusiasm displayed by the staff itself, for in our hands the production of a yearbook becomes a very personal matter.

» We are justly proud of the confidence placed in our ability to produce a book in keeping with the ideals of the staff and school which sponsor it. We earnestly hope that this feeling of confidence will persist, and that it will be our privilege to place the facilities of our organization at the service of the yearbook staff at Barnard College through successive years.
